Artificial Intelligence Contributions:

Images: The images in this book were generated using artificial intelligence tools. According to current U.S. Copyright Office guidelines, works created solely by AI without human authorship are not eligible for copyright protection. Therefore, these images are not protected by copyright.

Text: Portions of the text were assisted by artificial intelligence; however, the selection, curation, structuring, compilation, extensive editing, and refinement of all content were performed by Duncan Stroud. The author developed the Python code that programmed the AI, curated the outputs through rigorous selection and modification, and provided substantial editorial guidance to shape the final work. Under current U.S. Copyright Office guidelines, AI-generated text in its raw form may not be independently copyrightable, but works that exhibit sufficient human creativity are eligible for copyright protection. This book, as a creative compilation and editorial work, is protected under copyright law, with the author asserting rights over the selection, arrangement, and refinement of the material.
